Acknowledgement

My profound gratitude goes to the Almighty God, my Creator and Giver of life for making this another gift from Him to me. Whatever I am today and that I will ever be is by Him. To Him I give all the glory and praises.

Writing this thesis was a fascinating process during which I had the chance to work, interact and most importantly learn from many people. I wish to express my gratitude to the Lead City University; the governing board and the management for providing enabling environment for the research of this magnitude. My gratitude also goes to the staff and management of the Lead City University library. The materials made available both physical and virtual have tremendously contributed to the success of this work.

I appreciate the leadership of the department of Management and Accounting of the Lead City University, Ibadan. You remained the hub of my academic transformation.

I am especially grateful to the Vice-Chancellor who also double as my supervisor, Prof. K. A Adeyemo, who is a symbol of many things to me; he is a mentor, guardian, counsellor and father to me. His intellectual leadership, guidance and the constant support in making this work what it is cannot be quantified. I was lucky to have met him on this singular earthly journey someone like him who kept stimulating my interests in a number of ways, both inside and outside the academic sphere. His comments and suggestions have significantly sharpened my thoughts and enriched my research at different stages constituting the thesis. It is commendable to say that he was there for me at all times and that is why this work could be completed in time.

I am most grateful to the Head of Department, Dr. T. M. Akinbo, for her tremendous interest in this work which facilitated the timely completion of this work and Dr. O. Olaleye and Dr. J. A.

Adejuwon who right from the inception of this programme have been playing a leading role of ensuring the success of my programme at Lead City University. Your supports have propelled me this far. The same goes for Prof. G. E Oyedokun whose is a brother, mentor and motivator in the Department. His intellectual contributions to this work and counsels went a long way to the completion of this work. God will continue to reward you.

I also acknowledge the contributions of Dr. F. Igbadumhe, Dr. A. Onamusi and Dr. Badru who have played highly motivating and critical roles from the inception of this programme. Their comments and criticisms have enhanced the quality of this work. Your fountain will not dry up.

I also acknowledge the immensurable contributions of my lecturers in the department and faculty of management sciences to this work; Prof. O. Campbell, who is the Dean of the Faculty, thank you, God bless you ma; Dr. Longe, Kayode, Dr. C. T. Jegede, Dr. O.O. Adepoju, Dr. L. A. Balogun, Dr. Fatoki, Dr. S.A. Babarinde, Dr. B.S. Adeleke, Dr. Olusola J. Oladejo, Mr. M. Ayilara, Mr. A. Taiwo, Mrs. E. I. Aina, Dr. O.T. Oreagba, Mr. O. I. Ibikunle, Mr. A.I Olateju, Miss K. O. Adejuwon, Mrs. D. Oloyede and Mr. A. Adewumi, God grant you more wisdom.

Many thanks to all my class mates for their assistance in many ways, I love you all. I am grateful to the class coordinator, Akinleye Bilikis and other numerous to mention of the post graduate class of Accounting, Lead City University for moral support. You will surely be rewarded by Almighty God.

I am grateful to Dr Olayiwola John of Department of Administration and Accounting, Obafemi Awolowo University and Dr Adegbayibi Adesanmi of Department of Accounting, Adekunle Ajasin University. I must commend your efforts and support in this academic journey. Your intellectual contributions and constructive criticisms in no small way has made this work a huge success. You are friends turned brothers. Thank you.

Finally, my sincere gratitude and unreserved appreciation go to my precious and beloved wife, Mrs. Omole Juliana Okwuchi. You largely contributed to this thesis through your passionate prayers, precious support, infinite sense of humour, and more importantly, your unconditional love and sacrifice. Thank you for being there to encourage me when the stress of work was much. May the peace of God which passes all understanding be with you. Amen
